Thinking Out Loud

By H. M. L.

When we consider the cowardice inherent in modern war, the attack on defenseless women and children from the air, the overwhelming of little independent nations by large armies of mechanized troops, the impressment of captive and helpless men and women into the ranks of slave regiments who must work for their masters in order to live, we ask, "has chivalry vanished from our earth?"

No, the chivalry of which Lord Tennyson sang in the early nineteenth century in majestic lyrics such as "Idylls of the King," "The Holy Grail," and other poems of King Arthur's knights, has not vanished completely. Succor is still offered those in dire need. Women in many parts of the world are still regarded as more than dams of male posterity. The Christian concepts of which chivalry became the living code of conduct and a way of life during the middle ages, bequeating its rich tradition to the later centuries, has not perished.

The dragon of brutality, utter cowardice, and mental depravity, to be sure, still lives, though for a time, a century or more, we believed him dead. But St. George on his charger also rides the highways of the world and ultimately he will overtake this brute and again pinion him to earth with his lance.

As long as we maintain the Red Cross, we are still moved, much or little, by that spirit which moved the Gallahads and Lancelots of King Arthur's court in their quest for honor in well doing. Whatever we do to clothe, feed and bind up the wounds of the victims of war's bestial cruelties, that we do in the same chivalrous spirit that burned in the hearts of Lord Tennyson's heroes.

The Red Cross roll call opens tomorrow, after Armistice Day, a day for beginning the annual outpouring of alms for those within and without our gates, who are strangers to us. The women who are knitting syeaters so industriously nowadays have not the least thought of the identity of those who will wear them. They work for an ideal as old, at least, as the Christian faith. Those who enroll in the Red Cross this week have no concern regarding those whom their generosity will bless. They are all strangers to us, as much so, as that stranger on the road to Jericho, who overcome by thieves, and left half dead, was rescued and cared for by a "certain Samaritan!" It is this old ideal of service to those in need, that is fostered and maintained by the Red Cross.

Many people will note that the Red Cross no longer renders a report of work done in those countries under the dominion of the swastika. This we may be certain is not the fault of the Red Cross, but is due either to Germany's refusal to permit such aid, or because under conditions imposed, it would mean the Red Cross was aiding Hitler's war. We may be sure that the time will come when this great agent of human charity will be welcomed in the lands now under the warlord's heel.

There has been a disposition in recent times, among those who once were generous contributirs to the Red Cross and other charities, since the federal government has entered into competition with individual citizens in alms giving, taxing all Americans for this purpose, to shrug off the obligation that rests on every senstive conscience. Of course, this is specious reasoning, for after all the real advantage in giving accrues to the giver more than to the recipient. Those who are moved to give to the Red Cross, help to maintain the standards of an enlightened and onward marching civilization.

Yellowjackets Tie Miners

Local Eleven Knots Score After G. V. Took Lead In Second Half Of Contest

TRADITIONAL ARMISTICE DAY BATTLE WITNESSED BY LARGEST CROWD, INCLUDING HUNDREDS OF FANS FROM NEVADA CITY

A 7 to 7 tie.

Thus did the annual Armistice Day battle between the Nevada City and Grass Valley High School teams end today, marking the first time in many years in which the Yellowjackets walked off the field with at least an even break with their inter-county opponents.

The contest, one of the principal attractions of the Armistice Day celebration in Grass Valley, was nearly as colorful as the parade which preceded it.

The Miners took the lead early in the second half on a beautiful 30-yard run by Leo Mitchell. The attempt at conversion was good.

The joy of the Grass Valley rooters was short lived, however, as the Yellowjackets in this instance in the person of Allen Spracklen a short time later, took advantage of a Miner fumble and romped nearly half the length of the field for a touchdown.

Floyd Ruth plowed through the center of the Grass Valley line for the extra point and a tie ball game.

The battle, traditional "Big Game" of the year for the two squads, was witnessed by probably the largest crowd in Grass Valley gridiron history. Yellowjacket rooters were nearly as plentiful as the Grass Valley supporters.

Ceremonies Held

Prior to the opening of the game flag raising ceremonies took place on the field. The Grass Valley High School girls drill team performed and the bands of the two schools played.

The first half of the battle was scoreless. The two teams battled up and down the field with neither one appearing to have an advantage. A penalty of 15 yards placed the ball on Grass Valley's one yard line at one point but Schindhelm's kick pulled the Miners out of a deep hole.

Miners Score

The Miners' drive to pay dirt began just after the second half opened. Mitchell, on an off-tackle plunge, broke clear and scampered to a touchdown. Schindhelm on a similar play, tallied the extra point.

It wasn't long before the Yellowjackets had the ball contest on an even basis. A fumble by Mitchell, who made the brilliant run for a touchdown for the Miners, led to the score. Spracklen, Yellowjacket fullback, recovered the fumble in midfield and shaking off half a dozen tacklers, tallied the six points. Ruth then plunged through the line for the extra point, knotting the contest at 7 all.

Thrills Galore

The second half of the game made up for what the first half lacked in thrills. Nearly every second of the final half was interesting. First Grass Valley would threaten to score and then the Yellowjackets would turn the tables and have the Miners backed up in their own territory.

The Miners missed several good opportunities to score when well directed passes were muffed by the intended receivers. The brilliant playing of Schindhelm, star fullback for Grass Valley, who consistently made deep holes in the Yellowjacket line for large yardage, many times placed the Nevada City eleven in tough spots.

Muscardini Good

In the second half Bill Muscardini took over the punting and his well directed kicks helped the Yellowjackets cause. Ruth, considered one of the best backfield men on high school football teams in northern California, played his usual good game. When the Yellowjackets threatened to score in the closing seconds of the game it was Ruth who led the way.

On the first play after the Miners punted from deep in their own territory, Ruth on an end run, made thirty yards. Muscardini's pass to Ruth on the next play was good for 20 more yards but the whistle ended the game just when the Yellowjackets were in an excellent position to score.

George Phillips was the Yellowjacket captain for the game. Kirk Martin, who was injured in the San Juan game, was the honorary captain.

The Nevada City players who saw action in the game were:

Benuzzi, Barry, Davies, Farmer, Joyal, Haddy, Masterson, Muscardini, Phillips, Roberts, Ruth, Ronnigen, Spracklen, St. John, Widauf, Worthley and Watkins.

The Grass Valley players included:

E. Battista, T. Battista, captain, Blight, Bourtayre, Bryan, Bryant, Capuder, Christensen, Dodson, Fulton, Gilbert, Holt, Juliff, Lee Martin, Mitchell, Moneta, Petty, Rule, Schindhelm, Scott and Sullivan.

DRIVE FOR RED CROSS OPENS

The Red Cross opens its drive Tuesday, November 12, as it is the only agency which people may be certain that a proper distribution will be made in every emergency, the people of Nevada City are urged to give wholehearted support, as they have done in the past.

JOIN RED CROSS

Over 400,000 young men will be called to the service of the United States through the Selective Training and Service Act. It is traditional that the Red Cross helps safeguard the welfare of the men of our armed forces and their families. To this end the American Red Cross must keep pace with the expanding forces of national defense. The military authorities have specifically requested they do this.

During the present crisis in Europe the Red Cross has actively taken part in assisting the sick and destitute. Ambulances, foodstuffs, medicines, clothing, surgical dressings and other relief essentials have been sent to Europe. Referring to rumors that Germany has confiscated American Red Cross supplies and funds, the National Red Cross in Washington, D. C. has issued statements to the effect that there is no

Armistice Day

The meaning of Armistice Day is changed this year—changed tragically and sadly. We have become accustomed to celebrating November 11 as a Day of Peace, a day of rejoicing that war is past and peace ahead. But this year the day must seem exactly what the term implies — a day of armistice, which means not peace but armed truce. Armistice Day, 1940, finds us rearming to the teeth, so that the armed dictators who frankly hate democracy will be compelled to keep the bloodless armed truce through fear of us, if not sincere peace through friendship. Some day we may celebrate November 11 joyfully again, as the day symbolic of world peace. This year, it must be just—a day of armistice.—Contributed.

Prosperity Is In The Air

Prosperity looms in the air over California—prosperity that will come when the aviation industry reaches adult stature as an enormous consumer of American materials, products, brains and labor, and as an incalculable creator of new national wealth.

Right now, at a Santa Monica factory, finishing touches are being rushed on the world's biggest airplane—the B-19 Army bomber: Its wing span is 212 feet — 60 feet greater than the trans-Pacific clippers'; its fuselage is 135 feet—29 feet longer than the clippers'. long enough to house three railway box cars! Its weight, fully loaded, will be 164,000 pounds —almost double a clipper's 84,000 pounds! The B-19 is as tall as a three story building, and contains three million rivets and 10 miles of electric wiring! It could cross the Atlantic, drop 28 tons of bombs and return without landing or refueling! It can transport 125 soldiers! Five hundred engineers and workmen have labored four years to build it, working from four acres of blueprints!

When such gigantic engineering enterprises are possible while the aircraft industry is in its infancy—before mass production methods have been developed, before youngsters learn to fly family planes as they now learn to drive family cars—the future probabilities dwarf superlatives. The demands of war speed development of aeronautic technique—development at whatever cost. But the commercial and pleasuse needs of the peacetime world to come may give the U. S. A. the vast new industry which many economists say she must have to pull out of the debts of the depression and the debts of rearmament.

Already the climate that gave California the movie industry has made her the pioneering center of American plane manufacture and research. And when the limitless aviation industry attains full flight, its wings of prosperity will fill the sunny air of California.—Contributed.

Death and Taxes

While rescuers were digging through tons of debris to save the living and bring forth the dead among 200 persons trapped in the basement bomb shelter of a great London department store one day last week, women in other parts of the store were crowding the counters to buy perfumery and cosmetics—before drastic new sales taxes went into effect.

Death and taxes—the only two certainties, side by side.

The will to peace backed by defensive might save Americans from so horrible a form of death; but crushing taxes such as those that clutched at the purses of the women shoppers must be the portion of all Americans, inevitably and soon. We have been concerned over a federal public debt crowding the fifty billion dollar mark. But the defense program will, estimates the United States chamber of commerce, cost another fifty billion—will double that debt to one hundred billion. Furthermore, maintenance of the military establishment, after rearament has been effected, will cost between seven billon and ten billion dollars annually, whereas total federal revenues for this year will slightly exceed five billion dollars.

Taxes such as Americans have never known are ahead of every single citizen to bear those staggering costs. All sincere Americans will pay them willingly—since only an America bristling with defense armament may escape the vaster costs of actual war and the frightfulness of war's wholesale death by violence—but all sincere Americans will also resolve that tax-eating governmental extravagances cease completely. Taxpayers will be in no mood, from now on, to countenance graft, waste or incompetency in governmental use of public money or public credit—whether by city, county, state or national agencies. The way of the taxpayer will be hard enough at best, for a long, long time to come. And as he prepares to shoulder the grevious load of justifiable taxation for national security, he demands the death of boondoggling—everywhere and in of its forms.—Contributed.

PROCLAMATION

This year the annual American Red Cross Roll Call will be held from November 11th to November 30th.

The need of funds for this most worthy organization is greater this year than at any time since the last world war. In view of the expanding domestic program of the Red Cross national organization its 3,721 chapters and 6,585 branches, and the increasing necessity of furnishing aid to the expanding military forces of this nation it is necessary that the American Red Cross be adequately financed. During this time of American preparedness, I call upon all citizens in the State of California to give as freely as they can during this annual American Red Cross Roll Call so that the quota for California will be over-subscribed.

The funds subscribed during this drive will be used entirely for domestic purposes and will be kept entirely separate from funds prevously ear-marked for war relief overseas.

Now, therefore, in view of these facts, I, Culbert L. Olson, Governor of the State of California, do hereby proclaim the period of November 11th through November 30th, 1940, as American Red Cross Roll Call period of the State of California.

In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this first day of November, nineteen hundred and forty.

CULBERT L. OLSON,
Governor of California.

BENJ. HALL,
Mayor, Nevada City, California.

Herbert and Henry Paine, mining men of the Lake City district, were visitors in Nevada City yesterday.

Story of Steel Will Be Rotary Club Attraction

"Steel—Man's Servant" is the title of the program for the Rotary Club next Thursday noon.

This is a technicolor sound, motion picture and is the thrilling drama of steel making from the ore mine to the finished product.

This picture has been produced by the United States Steel Company and will be shown at the local Rotary Club through the courtesy of H. E. Rogers, sales manager of the Columbia Steel Company of San Francisco.

Coughlan Chairman

Carroll Coughlan of the Alpha Stores, Ltd., will be program chairman.

"Steel—Man's Servant" is the first complete industrial film produced in sound and color.

The equipment, direction and technique used in making this picture were the same as in making a Hollywood feature production, but with this important difference:

The actors in this drama are the men who actually make steel. They played the leading roles. There was no rehearsing.

Thrilling Views

The technicolor camera men took their equipment from one end of the country to the other, from the depths of the mines to the blast furnaces and mills. They captured the most thrilling steps in steel making, the transformations which take place in the changing of ore to the many kinds of steel, the blending of natural hues of open pit ore mines and of lake and sky.

They show the flashing reds and yellows as they issue from Bessemer converters or illumine open hearth charging floors. The soaking pits radiating yellow-whites. Rows of newly shaped ingots imparting orange-red. Slabs taken form in the slabbing mills. The whole magnificent story is told in beautiful sequence supported by sound effects.

Great Industry

The purpose of "Steel—Man's Servant" is to acquaint one with the little known wonders of one of our greatest industries — to instruct as well as entertain—to show the world of acitvity which precedes the making of safer and cheaper automobiles, and other servants of man; the construction of great bridges and buildings and the manufacture of countless products, from tacks to streamlined trains.

Edwin C. Hill is the narrator. The musical score was composed especially for this purpose. Interpreting the various steps in steelmaking, it provides a continuous background for the pictures. The score was recorded by an orchestra of selected musicians under the direction of Robert Armbruster.

COUNCIL GIVES COLD SHOULDER TO DELEGATION

Trustees Not In Favor Of Parking On North Pine Street

The city council, at its meeting last Thursday night, gave no encouragement to a delegation of North Pine Street businessmen who appeared before the trustees to request 30 minute parking on Pine Street between Broad and Spring Streets.

R. J. Berggren told the council parking was allowed on the street before it was taken over by the state as a highway route and he could see no reason why parking should not be again allowed on the street now that the state has rerouted the highway down Sacramento Street.

Speak In Favor

Ernest Schreiber and Max Benkert also spoke in favor of allowing parking on the street. Both stated parking even for a short time on the street would be beneficial to their businesses.

The chief objection of the council to parking on the street was that if the fire engines swung around the Broad Street corner onto Pine any cars parked on the street would cause a serious accident.

The council discussed the proposed improving of the Gault Bridge, for which WPA allotment was recently granted, and authorized City Engineer E. C. Uren to cooperate with WPA officials in drawing plans for the remodeling and widening of the narrow bridge, which has always been considered a traffic hazard.

Mrs. A. Deschwanden and Mrs. Hamilton of the High School Parent Teachers Association, who appeared before the council to determine its attitude on straightening the lower Grass Valley road in back of the high school, which woud allow for the widening of the athletic field, were referred to the Nevada City Board of Education.

SRA CREW TO CLEAN UP PARK

ESTIMATED 25,000 CHRISTMAS TREES WILL BE FELLED IN TAHOE FOREST

While armies bent on destruction are on the march in Europe, a much more peaceful army has started its march from the Tahoe National Forest, according to Guerdon Ellis, forest supervisor at Nevada City.

This army is made up of the famous Tahoe red fir (silver tip) and white fir trees, that are now being cut by dealers and will eventually find their way into thousands of Pacific Coast homes to bring Christmas cheer and symbolize the coming of "Peace on Earth toward Men of Good Will."

Logging Engineer B. C. Goldsmith estimates that approximately 25,000 trees will be cut within the forest about the same number as in 1939. Approximately 20,000 of these will be from government lands, and the remainder from privately owned lands within the forest boundaries.

Several large land owners have entered nto cooperative agreements with the forest service, according to Goldsmith, whereby the government negotiates the sales of trees and supervises the cutting, and turns over to the land owner receipts from the sales, minus the cost of administration by the forest service. This gives the land owners revenue, where in former years the trees were taken by poachers, and it also enables the forest service to better prevent the Christmas tree poaching on all land within the forest boundaries, according to Goldsmith.

It is expected this year that practically all of the trees will be sold to experienced dealers, since it is now necessary to go considerable distances from the main traveled roads and bring the trees out by pack horse, tractor and sleds, or on pioneer roads built by the dealers.

Contrary to the opinion held by some people, this is not deemed a wholesale slaughter of young trees, according to Goldsmith, since only about ten or twelve trees will be found on the average acre that will possess the foliage and symmetry to qualify them for the market. Cutting is done under the supervision of forest officers, so that only useable trees are cut and the stand left in condition for a future crop.

Tahoe officials will maintain a patrol throughout the season to guard against poachers on both forest and private lands, and will enforce the state law requiring Christmas tree dealers to have notarized permits to possess or transport the trees. The elimination of Christmas tree poaching should better assure buyers that only first class trees will be offered for sale in the retail markets.

Each Family Will Be Limited To One Tree In Forest This Year

One Christmas tree to a family will be the policy on the Tahoe National Forest this season for local residents who like to "cut their own", according to Forest Supervisor Guerdon Ellis. To many people, Ellis says, one of the thrills of the season is the expedition into the woods to select and cut their own tree. In spite of the dwindling supply of available trees within practical distance from roads, Tahoe officials will cooperate in an effort to satisfy this natural desire on the part of many people, but in order to meet the annual future demand as far as possible, it is necessary to limit the trees that can be cut under a free permit.

Secure Permits

Ellis advises residents in the communities on the forest to secure permits from the various district rangers. It is expected, though, that the bulk of permits will again be issued at the Nevada City office, since the largest accessible stand on the forest occurs between the Junction Guard Station and the top of Bear Valley grade on highway 20.

Advise Tree Purchase

Persons primarily interested in getting a good tree at the least expense, are advised to purchase from the regular dealers. Not only will the purchase price be, in all probability, less than the expense involved in personally going after a tree, but much better trees will be available in the retail market than can be secured by individuals within practicable distance from a road.
